Decision Journal

Think Better. Decide Better. Learn Faster.

By Ricky Recalcati

Introduction

Every decision teaches you something.

The problem is that most people only remember the outcome—not what they were thinking when they made it.

A Decision Journal helps separate good decisions from lucky outcomes and bad outcomes from bad thinking.

Over time you'll begin to notice patterns:

- recurring mistakes
- emotional decisions
- hidden biases
- better judgement

Professional investors, CEOs and elite performers have used decision journals for decades.

This workbook gives you a practical system you can return to again and again.

How To Use This Journal

Complete a new entry before making any meaningful decision.

Examples include:

- accepting a new job
- investing money
- hiring someone
- changing careers
- buying a house
- starting a business
- making an important personal decision

Once the outcome becomes clear, return to the journal and complete the review.

Your goal isn't perfection.

Your goal is improving your thinking.

The Decision Framework

Before every important decision ask yourself:

1. What decision am I making?

2. Why does it matter?

3. What outcome do I want?

4. What assumptions am I making?

5. What evidence supports them?

6. What evidence challenges them?

7. What would make me change my mind?

Common Thinking Traps

Watch for these biases:

- ☐ Confirmation bias
- ☐ Overconfidence
- ☐ Fear of missing out
- ☐ Sunk cost fallacy
- ☐ Recency bias
- ☐ Anchoring
- ☐ Groupthink
- ☐ Emotional decision-making

Reflection:

Which of these affects you most often?

Blank Decision Templates

The remainder of the workbook should contain six identical full-page decision templates using the same structure:

- Decision
- Context
- Options
- Risks
- Assumptions
- Final Choice
- Confidence Rating
- Future Review
- Lessons Learned

Each template should start on a new page and leave generous writing space.
